

Located in the older, front part of the house, the living room features walls painted azure blue to create a cosy, enveloping ambience and accentuate the height of the original windows. Despite being filled with part of David's prized collection of iconic mid-century modern furniture — including Le Corbusier chairs from Cassina, and a desk and chair by Marcel Breuer from Klaus — the space doesn't feel too grown-up or serious. Everything is low, lounge-like and supercomfortable. "We spend a lot of family time around the fireplace, so we replaced the old, ornate mantel with the painted-wood one from our old house, instantly making us feel at home," says Lisa. The new granite hearth and surround from Saltillo Imports add subtle tension. Coffee table by Frank Gehry, Knoll; love seat by Patricia Urquiola for B&B Italia, Kiosk; side table by Antonio Citterio for Flexform, Italinteriors; bench by George Nelson, Herman Miller; desk, chair, Klaus; artwork by Martinello (by windows), Jennifer Bell (over mantel), Kal Mansur (over desk), Art Interiors; flag pillow, Au Lit; wall colour, Stone Blue (86), Farrow & Ball.
